

Program Information

College:	Norman J. Radow College of Humanities and Social Sciences
Department:	Government and International Affairs – Undergraduate
Program:	Military Leadership, Minor

Program Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of this degree from KSU, students will be able to:

1. Practice adaptive leadership in challenging scenarios related to garrison and tactical operations, improving their skills in adjusting strategies based on changing circumstances.
2. Build awareness and competence in leading tactical operations up to the platoon level.
3. Deliver briefings to both small and large audiences, honing their communication skills.
4. Explore, evaluate, and develop skills in decision-making, persuasion, and motivating team members in Contemporary Operating Environments (COE).
5. Function effectively as a member of a team as they plan, execute, and assess complex operations.
6. Provide constructive performance feedback to subordinates and assess risk in operational situations.
7. Employ decision-making skills, taking ethical considerations into account, and determining appropriate courses of action in complex scenarios.
8. Identify differences in customs and courtesies, military law, principles of war, and rules of engagement in the context of international terrorism.